The Issues

Ergonomic-related injuries and illnesses are the leading causes of lost workdays for U.S. businesses. According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, nearly one-third of lost-time incidents involve overexertion or repetitive motions. Ergonomic assessments can help you recognize the potential and prevent these incidents. Collectively known as cumulative trauma disorders, these injuries include:

- Low-back pain
- Strains and sprains
- Hernias
- Carpal tunnel syndrome
- Tendonitis
- Hand-arm vibration syndrome

How do you identify the causes of these problems?
And what are the best ways to control them?

The Answers

With OneBeacon Technology's risk control services, our own highly-trained risk control and ergonomics specialists are available for assessments and consultation. Our team understands how to recognize and control the risk factors that can lead to injury from overexertion or repetitive motion. We're ready to share that expertise with you.

OneBeacon's ergonomic assessments can address:

- Manufacturing workstations
- Warehouse pick-and-pack operations
- Distribution and delivery operations
